Day Two - Citizenship

“No one is born a good citizen, or a good democrat or a good leader; it takes time and education.” - Kofi Annan

What does it mean to be a citizen? In a 2018 CBS poll, 93% of Americans agreed that welcoming people from different cultures is an important aspect of the American way of life, but those of us born into our citizenship often take for granted the responsibility that comes with our birthright. Today let's consider how our role as citizens is critical to sustaining a healthy democracy.

---

Choose One of Today's Challenges

#1: Would you pass the citizenship test?

- Take a practice test.
- Read the naturalization oath every new citizen recites at the naturalization ceremony. Extra credit if you actually read it out loud.

#2: Everyone's American citizenship journey is different and sharing them can teach us about our values and privileges.

- Read some personal stories from the New Americans Campaign

- If you've got access to Netflix, watch the short \(34 min\) documentary, *Out of Many, One*.

#3: What if the word citizen was a verb instead of a noun? When you think about citizen as a word of action instead of a set of privileges, does that change your mindset about civic duty?

- Listen to this episode of How to Citizen with Baratunde (60 min) when he speaks with Eric Lui, founder of Citizen University about citizenship in action in America

#4: What does it take to be a good citizen?

- Take a look at what Pew Research found and consider which activities you'd remove and which you'd add?

Want to do more?

- Volunteer with Global Cleveland to be a Community Navigator. You'll be trained to work with members of ethnic communities in our own backyard to make sure they understand their rights and can find a path to citizenship.
